Those key facts are only the tip of the iceberg when it comes to America history. Brush up on your history with these 10 facts about the U.S. that you probably didn't know. Sitting Presidents Have Gone into Battle with TroopsThe president has the title commander-in-chief of the military, but few of them have actually joined troops on the battlefield. George Washington led the militia to Bedford in 179Eighteen years later, James Madison borrowed dueling pistols from his secretary and headed to the streets of Washington to confront the British during the War of 181Lincoln later was present at the Civil War Battle of Fort Stevens.George Washington Is the Highest Ranking Member of the MilitaryWhen George Washington retired from public service after leading the Revolutionary Army and serving as the country's first president, he was a lieutenant general. In 1976, he received a new title: General of the Armies of the United States, in recognition of his contributions to the American military system. No one can have a higher title.A Slave Introduced the Concept of Inoculation to the CountryCotton Mather's slave, Onesimus, talked of the African practice of scratching infected cells from a sick person into a healthy one. He got the chance to prove how this practice worked when smallpox broke out in Massachusetts. Although the colonists did not accept this practice, it did show up on the battlefield during the Revolutionary War.No One Knows What Started the Salem Witch TrialsSalem history may be forever tied to what eventually became known as the Salem Witch Trials. In Arthur Miller's play based on the event, he suggests that the trials started after the reverend's slave confessed to working for the devil as she endured torture. The truth is that no one knows for sure exactly why the people in Salem succumbed to their fear of evil in the village and started arresting and executing people without solid evidence. Some possible theories include ergot poisoning, Lyme disease and family rivalries.Slavery Took Place in the Northern StatesThe colonists practiced slavery in all of the original 13 colonies. By 1804, all of the northern states had signed documents officially ending the practice within their borders, but it took a few more years before everyone in those states enjoyed freedom. President Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863 to free the slaves in the southern states. The thirteenth amendment made this the official law of the land.CC0/orythys/Pixabay The Colonies Voted for Independence on July 2Although the U.S. celebrates its birthday on July 4, representatives from the colonies voted for independence two days earlier. The second president of the new country, John Adams, refused to attend Fourth of July celebrations because it wasn't the right birthday.CC0/jill111/Pixabay Only One President Was Born on July 4This honor goes to Calvin Coolidge, who was born on July 4, 187He was president from 1923 until 192Two former presidents died on Independence Day. Thomas Jefferson and John Adams died within hours of each other on July 4, 1826.CC0/jill111/Pixabay No One Who Signed the Declaration of Independence Was Born in the United StatesSince the United States didn't exist as a country when the Declaration of Independence was signed, there's no way any of the signers could have been born in it. All of them were born in one of the colonies that eventually became the United States.There Was No Official U.S. Currency Until After the Civil WarThe early United States government tried to create currency called the Continental dollar, but it had no true value. Before the Civil War, there were several different types of money produced by individual banks. Eventually, Congress authorized new national currency and a national banking system.CC0/geralt/Pixabay The Elephant and Donkey Symbols Were Originally a JokeArtist Thomas Nash created the elephant and donkey symbols that now represent the Republicans and Democrats. It all dates back to 1874 political cartoon published in Harper's Weekly. This is the same man responsible for our modern image of Santa Claus.CC0/chayka1270/Pixabay MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET "Dear Old Skibbereen" is a traditional Irish folk song written sometime after the potato blight and Great Irish Famine of the 1840s and the Young Irelander Rebellion of 1848. The story is told as a conversation between father and son, with the father explaining why he left his beautiful home in Skibbereen, a village in County Cork. The song has been collected by folklorists both in Ireland and in Irish communities in the United States, and has been recorded by many popular Irish artists. It also featured in the film Michael Collins, where it was sung by the title character, played by Liam Neeson. Vocabulary note: a cothamore is a large overcoat, from the Irish cota more, "big coat." O Father dear, I often hear you speak of Erin's IsleHer lofty scenes, her valleys green, her mountains rude and wildThey say it is a lovely land wherein a prince might dwellOh why did you abandon it? The reason, to me tell. O son, I loved my native land with energy and pride'Til a blight came o'er my crops, my sheep and cattle diedMy rent and taxes were too high, I could not them redeemAnd that's the cruel reason that I left old Skibbereen. O well do I remember the bleak December dayThe landlord and the sheriff came to drive us all awayThey set my roof on fire with cursed English spleenAnd that's another reason that I left old Skibbereen. Your mother too, God rest her soul, fell on the snowy groundShe fainted in her anguish, seeing the desolation roundShe never rose, but passed away from life to mortal dreamAnd found a quiet grave, my boy, in dear old Skibbereen. And you were only two years old and feeble was your frameI could not leave you with my friends, you bore your father's nameI wrapped you in my cothamore at the dead of night unseenI heaved a sigh and bade good-bye to dear old Skibbereen. O Father dear, the day may come when in answer to the callEach Irishman, with feeling stern, will rally one and allI'll be the man to lead the van beneath the flag of greenWhen loud and high, we'll raise the cry: "Remember Skibbereen!"
